Comment: Please do not implement rules that take away the ability for Americans to install or modify software on ones own devices.

These technologies are most often progressed with users not corporations and this will inhibit the ability of researchers to investigate and improve these devices.

Americans need the ability to fix security flaws in their own devices when the manufacturer neglects to not do so.

Users have in the past fixed serious bugs in their wifi drivers, which would be banned under the NPRM.

Not fixing security holes either feeds cyber-threats or increases electronic waste.

Billions of dollars of commerce, such as secure wifi vendors, retail hotspot vendors, depend on the ability of users and companies to install the software of their choosing.
